Considering whether a particular material is likely to have contained asbestos is a critical issue in asbestos compensation claims.

Many building materials have historically contained asbestos and less well-known sources are increasingly becoming the focus of enquiries to our experts. Taking early advice can help to ensure the identification of appropriate exposure sources and the collection of appropriate evidence.

This morning seminar for legal professionals involved in asbestos litigation to learn will have two sessions:

Session 1

Asbestos containing materials in buildings (ACMs)

Session 2

Identifying ACMs

The presentation will include over 50 photographs of ACMs. You will also have the opportunity to ask questions about particular materials and meet other Pragma experts.

Your speaker: Dave Maddison BSc (Hons) CoCA MFAAM TechIOSH

Dave provides expert liability evidence in asbestos disease litigation.
