There are a variety of factors to consider when preparing evidence for use in occupational ill-health claims. This is an opportunity for legal professionals to understand an Occupational Hygienist's approach to preparing reports in legal proceedings.

The aim of this session is to assist legal professionals in understanding the elements considered in preparing an Occupational Hygienist's report and assessing the viability of respiratory ill-health claims.

This session will cover:

- Collection of evidence
- Identification of causative agents and high-risk industries
- Qualification and quantification of exposure
- Workplace exposure limits and what they mean
- Applicable legislation and what is expected from employers

Your speaker: Tina Conroy MChem, DipOH, CMFOH

Tina has over 15 years' experience of identifying, assessing and controlling occupational and environmental health hazards and has been assisting the Court in her role as an Expert Witness for 6 years. Tina has prepared hundreds of reports to assist the Court in understanding exposure to respiratory health hazards and employer's liability in relation to a range of causative agents.

This is a free in-person event with limited spaces available.
